Honorable Members of the North Carolina General Assembly
Sam Hayes, Executive Director, North Carolina State Board of Elections
Francis X. De Luca, Chair, North Carolina State Board of Elections

Ladies and Gentlemen:

The North Carolina Office of the State Auditor (OSA) conducted a performance audit of the cost of odd-year municipal elections in North Carolina. The audit compiled and summarized the costs associated with the most recent municipal elections held in 2025.

Across North Carolina, 91 counties had a municipal election in 2025, and State Board of Elections Data shows roughly 822,000 people voted. The total cost to administer those municipal elections was approximately $8.4 million. As part of its evaluation, OSA calculated the estimated cost per vote.

Accordingly, larger counties with higher voter participation had a lower cost per vote than smaller counties with lower voter participation. While 220,805 people voted in Mecklenburg County at a total cost of $1.3 million and $5.83 per vote, only five people cast a ballot in Camden County at a total cost of $7,589 and $1,518 per vote.

This audit is informational in nature, providing a transparent look at costs associated with odd-year municipal elections. The appendix includes full county breakdowns in cost, along with reported benefits and challenges faced.

Respectfully submitted,

Dave Boliek
State Auditor

Counties Reported $8.4 Million in Costs to Administer 2025 Odd-Year Municipal Elections

The North Carolina Office of the State Auditor (OSA) conducted a performance audit to determine the total reported cost of odd-year municipal elections conducted in North Carolina during calendar year 2025.

The audit found that 91 North Carolina counties collectively reported spending approximately $8.4 million to administer 2025 odd-year municipal elections. According to the State Board of Elections data, approximately 822,000 votes were cast in those elections. OSA used the votes-cast data to provide context for reported cost per vote; the audit did not evaluate voter turnout or election efficiency.

Background

In North Carolina, odd-year municipal elections¹ are conducted pursuant to Chapter 163, Articles 23 and 24 of the North Carolina General Statutes, which were enacted by the General Assembly in 1971. N.C.G.S. § 163-279(a) established a uniform schedule requiring municipal elections to be held beginning in 1973 and every two or four years thereafter, as specified in each municipality's charter.

In 2025, municipal elections were held in 91 of North Carolina's 100 counties.

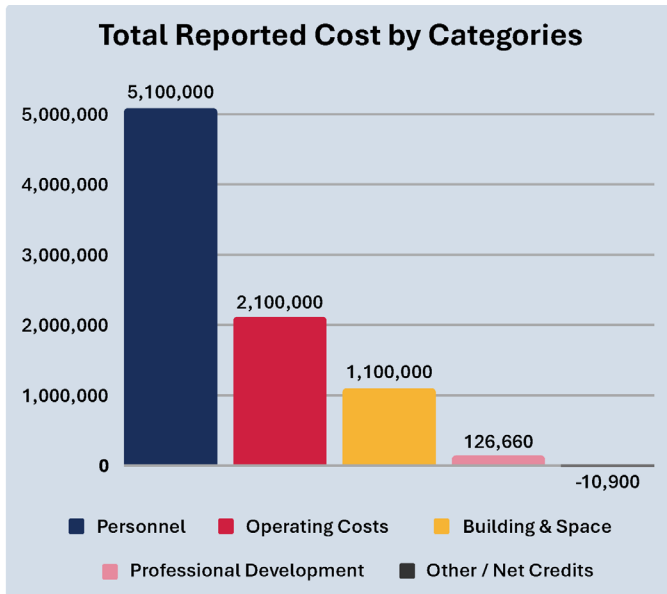

Odd-year elections are distinct from even-year general elections in that they are typically limited to local offices and affect only voters residing within the applicable jurisdiction. Although county boards of elections administer elections, the cost of odd-year elections is generally borne by the participating municipalities and special districts. State law requires these entities to reimburse counties for the actual costs incurred in administering their elections.²

The North Carolina State Board of Elections (NCSBE) provides statewide oversight, issues guidance, and promotes uniform administration of election laws and procedures.

¹ Odd-year municipal elections primarily include contests for offices in cities, towns, and incorporated villages, as well as certain special districts and sanitary districts.

² N.C.G.S. § 163-284.

Cost Drivers for Odd-Year Municipal Elections

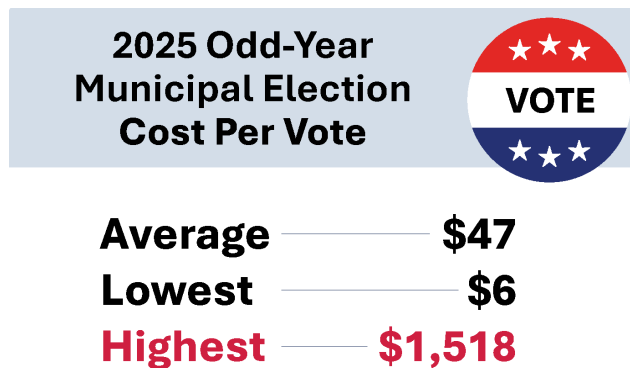

Reported costs were grouped into five primary categories as follows:

- Personnel: $5.1 million
- Operating Costs: $2.1 million
- Building and Space: $1.1 million
- Professional Development: $126,600
- Other / Net Credits: Net credit of $10,900³

Costs Vary Widely Across Counties

The election costs for the 2025 odd-year municipal elections varied across counties, as reflected in the cost per vote.

Source: Submitted county cost data, NCSBE voter turnout data, and auditor analysis.

Reported cost per vote was generally higher in smaller counties because many election administration activities must occur regardless of the number of voters who participate. When fewer votes are cast, reported costs are spread across fewer votes.

³ The "Other / Net Credits" category was negative because filing fee credits exceeded legal, compliance, and other miscellaneous costs reported in that category.

Chapter 147, Article 5A of the North Carolina General Statutes gives the Auditor broad powers to examine all books, records, files, papers, documents, and financial affairs of every state agency and any organization that receives public funding. The Auditor also has the power to summon people to produce records and to answer questions under oath.

Background

Overview of Odd-Year Elections in North Carolina

In North Carolina, elections are conducted at both the state and local levels. While statewide and federal elections occur in even-numbered years, many local governments hold elections in odd-numbered years. These elections, commonly referred to as odd-year municipal elections, primarily include contests for offices in municipalities such as cities, towns, and incorporated villages, as well as certain special districts and sanitary districts.

Odd-year elections are distinct from even-year general elections in that they are typically limited to local offices and affect only voters residing within the applicable jurisdiction. As a result, these elections generally involve fewer contests and a smaller eligible voter population than statewide elections.

Statutory and Historical Framework

North Carolina's odd-year municipal election structure is established in Chapter 163, Articles 23 and 24 of the North Carolina General Statutes. N.C.G.S. § 163-279(a) established a schedule for municipal elections beginning in 1973 and recurring every two or four years, depending on each municipality's charter.

Each municipality's charter determines key election requirements, including:

- The offices to be elected;
- How often elections are held; and
- The election method, within the options authorized by State law.

North Carolina law authorizes four methods for conducting municipal elections:

- Partisan Primary and Election Method – Candidates run by party affiliation, with a primary (and possible second primary) preceding a general election.⁴
- Nonpartisan Primary and Election Method – Candidates run without party affiliation; a primary is held when necessary to narrow the field of candidates.⁵
- Nonpartisan Plurality Method – All candidates appear on the ballot, and those receiving the highest number of votes are elected.⁶

⁴ See N.C.G.S. § 163-291.

⁵ N.C.G.S. § 163-294.

⁶ N.C.G.S. § 163-292.

- Nonpartisan Election and Runoff Method – A runoff election may be held if no candidate receives a majority of votes.⁷

The most common method used statewide is the nonpartisan plurality election.

Administration and Oversight

Responsibility for administering odd-year elections lies primarily with county boards of elections, as required by N.C.G.S. § 163-284. County boards are responsible for:

- Issuing election-related rules and instructions, consistent with law;
- Appointing, supervising, and removing election officials;
- Establishing and managing polling places and precincts;
- Recruiting and training election workers;
- Printing and distributing ballots;
- Procuring and maintaining voting equipment; and
- Conducting early voting and election day operations.⁸

Municipalities and special districts do not conduct elections directly. Instead, they rely on county boards to administer elections on their behalf.

The NCSBE provides statewide oversight, issues guidance, and promotes uniform administration of election laws and procedures.

Election Funding and Cost Responsibility

Although county boards administer elections, the cost of odd-year elections is generally borne by the participating municipalities and special districts. State law requires these entities to reimburse counties for the actual costs incurred in administering their elections.⁹

However, the method of cost allocation varies by county, and counties may:

- Bill municipalities for the full cost of elections,
- Allocate shared costs across multiple jurisdictions, or
- Absorb certain administrative or overhead costs.

As a result, the way costs are calculated and reported can differ across counties, even when similar election activities are performed.

⁷ N.C.G.S. § 163-293.

⁸ N.C.G.S. § 163-33.

⁹ N.C.G.S. § 163-284.

Key Cost Components of Elections

The cost of administering an election reflects multiple operational activities required to ensure that voting is conducted in accordance with State law. Major cost components typically include:

- Personnel (including poll workers, election officials, and administrative staff);
- Operating Costs (including ballot printing, coding, election materials, postage, advertising, public notices, supplies, travel, and support services);
- Voting Equipment (including delivery, setup, testing, and storage of voting machines and equipment);
- Polling Place and Facility Costs (including rental of voting locations and related facility expenses); and
- Training and Professional Development (including required training for election staff and officials).

Even in smaller elections, many of these activities must still be performed, resulting in fixed costs regardless of the number of voters or contests.

Factors That Influence Election Costs

Reported cost of odd-year municipal elections can vary across jurisdictions based on several factors, including:

- Number of participating municipalities or districts,
- Number of contests on the ballot,
- Number of polling places opened,
- Availability and scope of early voting,
- Staffing needs and local wage rates,
- Geographic size and population of the county, and
- Level of voter turnout.

Because many election costs are fixed, jurisdictions with fewer voters may experience higher costs on a per-vote basis, while larger jurisdictions may benefit from economies of scale.

Recent Legislative Changes

Since the adoption of N.C.G.S. § 163-291 in 1971, some municipalities have transitioned their elections from odd-numbered years to even-numbered years through legislative action.

For example:

- Senate Bill 265 (S.L. 2023-44) transitioned municipal elections in Henderson, Polk, and Rutherford counties to even-numbered years.
- House Bill 3 (S.L. 2025-13) moved the City of Monroe's municipal elections to even-numbered years and converted them from nonpartisan to partisan contests.

Audit Context

Odd-year elections provide a mechanism for municipalities and special districts to elect governing officials and address local issues independent of statewide election cycles. However, because these elections are conducted separately from higher-turnout elections, they involve distinct administrative processes and cost structures.

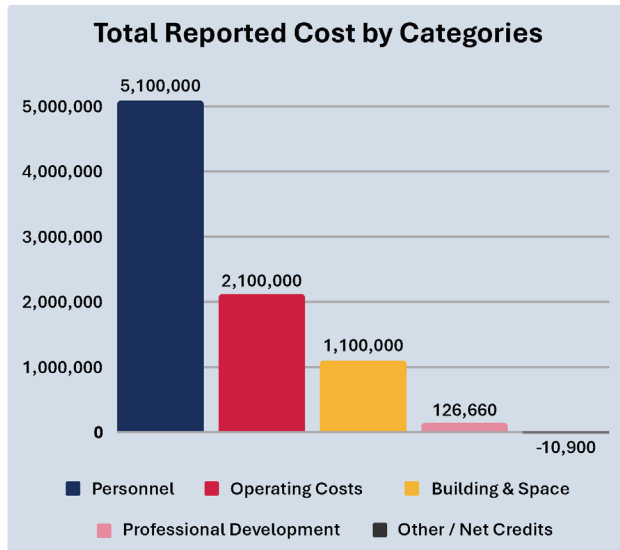

This audit was conducted to determine the total reported cost of odd-year municipal elections conducted in North Carolina during calendar year 2025. This report is informational in nature and does not evaluate the efficiency, necessity, or policy implications of odd-year elections.

Audit Results

Counties Reported $8.4 Million in Costs for 2025 Odd-Year Municipal Elections

The audit found that county boards of elections collectively reported that it cost approximately $8.4 million to administer 2025 odd-year municipal elections. The reported costs include expenses incurred in the administration of municipal and special district elections held in 91 North Carolina counties in 2025.

Reported costs were grouped into five primary categories as follows:

- Personnel: $5.1 million
- Operating Costs: $2.1 million
- Building and Space: $1.1 million
- Professional Development: $126,660
- Other / Net Credits: $10,900¹⁰

Personnel represented the largest reported cost category, accounting for approximately 60% of total reported costs. Operating costs and building and space costs accounted for most of the remaining reported costs.

¹⁰ The "Other / Net Credits" category was negative because filing fee credits exceeded legal, compliance, and other miscellaneous costs reported in that category.

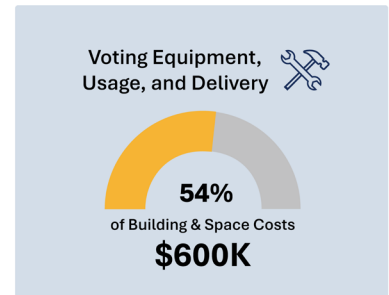

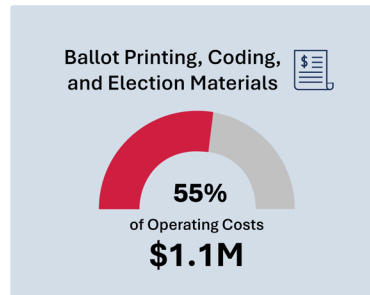

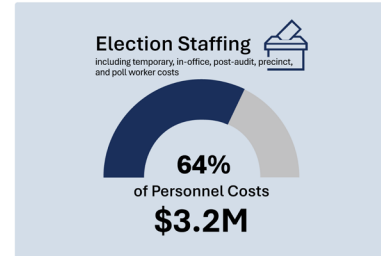

Key Reported Cost Categories

Reported costs were concentrated in personnel, operating costs, and building and space costs, which included activities commonly required to administer elections in accordance with State law.

Within each category:

- Personnel costs primarily included election staffing, including temporary, in-office, post-audit, precinct, and poll worker costs. Election staffing accounted for approximately $3.2 million, or 64% of total personnel costs.
- Operating costs were concentrated in ballot printing, coding, and election materials, which represented approximately 55% of operating expenses.
- Building and space costs primarily included voting equipment delivery, setup, and usage, as well as polling place rentals.

Expenses Breakdown by Category

These costs reflect activities that must occur regardless of election size, including staffing polling places, preparing ballots, and deploying equipment.

¹¹ Displayed cost figures represent costs reported by the 91 North Carolina counties that conducted odd-year elections in 2025. These cost data were self-reported by counties, were not independently audited, and may be subject to variation in reporting methods. Costs were aggregated for presentation purposes.

¹² Election Staffing including temporary, in-office, post-audit, precinct, and poll worker costs.

¹⁴ Support Staffing includes delivery, technicians, IT, and set-up costs.

Reported Cost per Vote Varied Across Counties

The audit identified a variation in reported cost per vote across counties. For 2025 odd-year municipal elections, the average reported cost per vote was $47, with reported costs ranging from approximately $6 to $1,518 per vote.¹⁵

Additionally, the average cost per vote was approximately $14 in large counties, $23 in medium counties, and $126 in small counties.¹⁶

This variation should be interpreted with caution. Many election administration activities must occur regardless of how many voters participate, including staffing polling places, preparing ballots, and deploying equipment. When fewer votes are cast, reported costs are spread across fewer votes, which can result in a higher reported cost per vote. Reported cost per vote is presented for context and should not be interpreted as an evaluation of voter turnout, election efficiency, or the reasonableness of reported costs.

Context on Voter Participation

For context, State Board of Elections data showed approximately 822,000 votes cast in 2025 odd-year elections. These elections are limited to specific municipalities or districts and, therefore, involve fewer eligible voters than even-year general elections. As a result, total participation, and the number of votes over which costs are distributed, is comparatively lower.

The total number of votes cast in the 2024 general election and the 2025 odd-year municipal elections are presented below, including a breakdown by county size. Reported totals reflect all votes cast statewide by the same 91 counties that administered 2025 odd-year municipal elections, as well as average votes cast within large, medium, and small counties.

¹⁵ Cost figures are presented on a cost-per-vote basis because the analysis uses votes cast, not unique voters. A voter may cast more than one vote across separate elections, such as a primary and a general election. Reported cost per vote may be higher in counties with fewer votes cast because election administration includes fixed activities that must occur regardless of participation. For example, Camden County reported approximately $7,600 in costs and 5 votes cast, while Mecklenburg County reported approximately $1.3 million in costs and about 220,805 votes cast.

The 2024 vote totals are included only to provide context for the relative scale of 2025 odd-year municipal elections. The audit did not compare the cost, efficiency, or policy merits of odd-year elections to even-year elections.

County Size	Average Votes Cast by County Size
	2024	2025
Large	166,259	30,406
Medium	32,572	2,524
Small	8,468	415

Auditee Response

OSA provided a draft of this report to the counties that conducted odd-year municipal elections in 2025 for review and feedback. No disagreements with the reported information were noted.

Objective, Scope, and Methodology

Objective

The objective of this audit was to determine the total reported cost of odd-year municipal elections conducted in North Carolina during calendar year 2025.

Scope

The audit scope was limited to reported costs for odd-year municipal elections conducted in North Carolina during calendar year 2025. This audit did not assess the reasonableness or necessity of reported costs, evaluate election outcomes, evaluate voter turnout, compare odd-year election costs to even-year election costs, or determine whether odd-year elections should be continued, changed, or consolidated.

Methodology

To determine the total cost of odd-year elections conducted in North Carolina during calendar year 2025, auditors performed the following procedures:

- Identified the county boards of elections that administered odd-year elections during calendar year 2025.
- Auditors sent data request forms to county boards of elections that administered odd-year municipal elections during calendar year 2025. The requests sought reported costs associated with those elections, broken down by municipality or jurisdiction and by cost categories. Auditors also requested contextual information, including election methods used, polling site information, and contests appearing on the 2025 ballot.
- Auditors collected odd-year municipal election cost data directly from the county boards of elections, aggregated the reported costs statewide, and categorized the costs into standardized categories for analysis and presentation. Reported cost figures were rounded to the nearest dollar for presentation purposes but remain materially accurate.

Cost data were self-reported by county boards of elections and were not independently audited. Reporting practices and cost allocation methods may vary across counties. For consistency, OSA aggregated reported costs into standardized categories for analysis and presentation.

For context, OSA obtained information related to voter turnout during the scope of the audit from the State Board of Elections.

Due to the nature of audit testing and the inherent limitations of an audit, together with limitations of any system of internal and management controls, this audit may not disclose all performance weaknesses or non-compliance.

Objective, Scope, and Methodology (concluded)

We considered internal control that was relevant to the audit objectives in planning and performing our audit. However, because internal control was not significant within the context of the audit objectives, we did not design our audit procedures to assess the design, implementation, or operating effectiveness of internal control. Accordingly, this audit does not provide a basis for expressing an opinion on internal control.

We considered the State Auditor's statutory appointment responsibilities related to election boards when evaluating independence for this engagement. OSA determined those responsibilities were separate from the audit work performed and did not impair independence for purposes of this audit.

We conducted this performance audit in accordance with generally accepted government auditing standards. Those standards require that we plan and perform the audit to obtain sufficient, appropriate evidence to provide a reasonable basis for our findings and conclusions based on our audit objectives. We believe that the evidence obtained provides a reasonable basis for our findings and conclusions based on our audit objectives.

Appendix D: County Perspectives on Odd-Year Municipal Elections

As part of the data request process, auditors asked counties to identify the benefits and challenges associated with conducting odd-year elections. The comments below summarize selected county perspectives and are included for context. They do not represent OSA's conclusions about whether odd-year elections should be continued, changed, or consolidated. OSA did not independently evaluate the accuracy of the county perspectives included in this appendix. Some comments were lightly edited for clarity or to remove identifying information without changing the substance of the response.

Counties identified several potential benefits of odd-year elections, including training opportunities for staff and poll workers, fewer ballot styles, reduced precinct worker confusion, and opportunities to test or refine procedures before higher-turnout elections.

Counties also cited administrative benefits, including simplified cost allocation and reimbursement with municipalities and greater focus on local races. For example, one county cited "the ability to separate the costs to bill the town for reimbursement," while another stated that odd-year elections allow municipal candidates to have "more of the spotlight."

- "Gives us time to work on updating new training materials, review any incidents that occurred in the Federal elections and come up with solutions for future elections."
- "Municipal Elections runs smooth with minimum issues for the office, pollworkers, and voters."

- "The number one challenge is to turn around the election after primary and begin general election process. Especially if we have recounts, etc. Time is the issue."
- "Voters who do not reside inside a municipality get confused as to why they are ineligible to vote in odd-years."

Counties also identified challenges associated with odd-year elections, including lower voter turnout, voter confusion about eligibility, compressed timelines between election events, staffing demands, and upfront costs for municipalities with smaller budgets. For example, one county official noted that voters who do not live within a municipality may be confused about why they are not eligible to vote in odd-year municipal elections. Counties also reported that the short turnaround between election events can strain staff and resources, such as when staff must complete canvass, prepare for candidate filing, recruit and train poll workers, and test voting equipment within a compressed period. Although odd-year elections may involve fewer voters and contests, they still require full election administration, including ballot preparation, polling place staffing, equipment setup, public notices, and election-day operations. These required activities can create upfront costs that are more difficult for smaller municipalities to absorb.

Some counties stated that shifting municipal elections to even-numbered years could increase ballot length and create operational challenges, such as additional ballot reconciliation, longer wait times, or equipment issues.

At least one county that consolidated odd and even-year elections reported cost efficiencies, stating that “even-numbered year consolidations have been proven to reduce expenses for municipalities and allows for fund reallocations.”

As part of the data request process, auditors asked counties to identify benefits and challenges associated with conducting odd-year elections. County responses reflected a range of perspectives. The table below summarizes common themes identified in those responses. The full county comments are included after the table to provide additional context. These themes are presented for informational purposes and do not represent OSA’s conclusions about whether odd-year elections should be continued, changed, or consolidated.

Summary of Common Themes Identified in County Responses

Benefits Reported by Counties	Challenges Reported by Counties
Training and preparation opportunities for staff and poll workers	Compressed timelines between municipal elections and subsequent election cycles
Fewer ballot styles and less ballot complexity	Low voter turnout despite full election administration requirements
Greater focus on local races and municipal candidates	Difficulty recruiting poll workers and meeting staffing requirements
Easier cost allocation and municipal billing	Upfront costs and budget strain for municipalities
More manageable election administration in some counties	Continuous workload and operational strain for election offices
Opportunity to update supplies, procedures, and equipment	Voter and poll worker confusion related to eligibility, precincts, or ballots
Reduced complexity compared to adding municipal races to even-year ballots	Potential ballot length, equipment, reconciliation, or wait-time issues if elections are shifted to even years
Better workload distribution across election cycles	Coordination and reimbursement requirements with municipalities

The following county comments provide additional details supporting the themes summarized above.

Benefits Reported by Counties

Theme	Related Themes	County Comment
Training, preparation, and procedure improvement	Fewer ballot styles; supply review; precinct worker clarity	“The Municipal elections both Primary and General are held in the fall, which gives us time to work on updating new training materials, review any incidents that occurred in the Federal elections and come up with solutions for future elections. It also gives us time to go through supplies to ensure everything is up to date and in working order. Another benefit to holding Municipal elections in odd years are fewer ballot styles to confuse precinct workers.”
Fewer ballot styles and administrative continuity	Municipal reimbursement; local race focus; planning efficiency	“The benefits of having odd-year elections include reducing the number of ballot styles we would need to manage compared to holding municipal elections in even-numbered years. Another benefit is that the county is able to be reimbursed by the municipalities for administering these elections. It also gives municipalities a dedicated opportunity to promote their local elections and focus voter attention on municipal races. In addition, odd-year elections provide consistency and continuity in election administration, allowing staff to better plan, prepare, and manage the process efficiently.”

Reduced voter confusion	Fewer ballots at precincts	“Less voter confusion. There is always voter confusion on where to vote and when to vote but not having 2 ballots at some precincts is a help.”
Training and process improvement	Equipment planning; staff recovery	“More time in odd-years to focus on office staff training. More time to implement/update more effective practices and training for poll workers. Should help in budget requests for equipment upgrades because county won't be spending as much in supplies and staffing in odd years. Gives county staff time to regroup and get some time off.”
Greater focus on local races	Easier municipal billing; simpler municipal ballots	“Odd-year municipal elections can benefit local governments by giving city and town races more room to stand on their own without the noise of presidential, congressional, and other contests. Therefore voters are able to focus more on directly local issues, candidates, and needs. Separate municipal ballots can also be easier to manage from an administrative standpoint. Also, odd-year elections make it easier to bill municipals for their portion of the election costs.”
Focused administration for smaller municipal elections	Fewer precincts; smaller staffing footprint	“We can focus all of our attention on the smaller Municipal Elections. As a small county we are limited as to the amount of workers we have to have. We only have 3 precinct versus 4 in the even year election. And every two years we will have only two precincts, as some municipal elections are every four years.”
Operational and administrative advantages	Filing processing; eligibility verification; ballot preparation; workload distribution; simpler ballots	“Odd-year elections provide significant operational and administrative advantages, particularly in a county with numerous municipalities. Conducting these elections in an off-cycle year allows staff to efficiently process filings, verify eligibility, prepare ballots, and support candidates without the added complexity of a statewide or federal election. This scheduling also helps alleviate administrative strain by distributing workload more evenly across election cycles. Additionally, ballots limited to municipal contests are shorter and more straightforward, making them easier for voters to navigate and reducing the likelihood of confusion or errors.”

Challenges Reported by Counties

Theme	Related Themes	County Comment
Compressed timelines	Operational workload; early voting requirements; municipal cost concerns	“One challenge of conducting odd-year elections is the extremely compressed timeframe between the November Municipal Election and the March Primary Election. Within this short period, staff must complete multiple critical tasks, including finalizing and canvassing municipal results, resetting operations, conducting inventory and procurement of supplies, managing candidate filing for the primary, assembling and distributing election materials, recruiting and training precinct officials, and programming and testing all voting equipment. This condensed schedule places significant demands on both staff and resources. The County also conducts municipal elections in both October and November, which creates an additional compressed turnaround between those election dates. Similar to the transition from November to the primary election, this short window further strains operational capacity. Another challenge relates to early voting requirements. Under current law, municipalities that choose to offer early voting must maintain uniformity in early voting sites and schedules. This can be difficult for smaller municipalities that may not have the financial resources to match the duration or scope of others. While some municipalities initially express interest in participating, they often reconsider once they understand the associated costs.”
Poll worker recruitment and administrative timeline	Low voter turnout; full administrative requirements; municipal budget strain	“The challenges of having odd-year elections include difficulty finding poll workers to serve during these election cycles. Another challenge is the tight administrative timeline, as once canvass is completed for the odd-year elections, staff must transition almost immediately into candidate filing for the even-year elections and preparations for the new year. Voter turnout is also typically very low, while the same administrative procedures, legal requirements, and operational standards must still be as in higher-turnout even-year elections. In addition, odd-year elections can create a potential budget strain on municipalities that are responsible for funding these contests.”
Potential ballot and equipment complexity if shifted to even years	Voter confusion; poll worker confusion; precinct split complexity	“If there were even numbered year elections I would have to have extra machine and municipal ballots in 2 precincts because my municipality is parts of 3 precincts. This would cause voter confusion and poll worker confusion.”
Preparation burden and continuous workload	Inventory; training; precinct planning; equipment testing; risk of missed tasks	“There is an enormous amount of preparation even for a small Municipal Election. Time that could be used to update manuals, review training tasks, inventory our supplies and view better options for our precinct officials, research precinct locations, make needed county contacts and the list goes on. Right after the Municipal Elections we could barely pack up and get our office in order before it was time for candidate filing, ballot ordering/proofing, Logic and Accuracy testing on all of the equipment, reviewing manuals and preparing for training, updating and sending out MAT visit information to nursing facilities and THAT list goes on as well. It is so easy to overlook a task and I am very thankful to the State Team that constantly sends out reminders, because it helps so much.”

Upfront costs and statutory complexity	Possible consolidation savings as stated by county; low-turnout administration; statutory requirements	“Significant upfront costs associated with the administration of municipal elections in odd-numbered years. Even-numbered year consolidations have been proven to reduce expenses for municipalities and allows for fund reallocations; Municipalities that opt for the non-partisan primary and election method via charter in odd-numbered years place significant burdens on the Board of Elections and cause statutory conflicts that necessitate exceptions via numbered memorandums (ex. NM 2023-01); Scaling down administration needs for historically low turnout given statutory requirements that do not contemplate participation levels (ex. precinct officials, notices, compensation, etc.)”
Low turnout and outreach needs	Standalone election costs; continuous workload; resource allocation	“Odd-year elections often experience lower voter turnout, which may require additional voter education and outreach efforts to ensure voters are aware an election is occurring. Cost can also be a consideration, as jurisdictions may bear the full cost of conducting a standalone election rather than sharing costs with statewide or federal contests held in even-numbered years. From an administrative standpoint, odd-year elections can also create a continuous election cycle, requiring staffing, preparation, and resource allocation in consecutive years, which may present workload and planning challenges for election offices.”
Low turnout and staffing requirements	Political party balance; municipal coordination; reimbursement communication	“Odd-year elections present several operational challenges. Voter turnout is typically very low, requiring additional outreach to ensure public awareness and participation. These elections are also less efficient, as the county must still fully staff polling places and conduct all standard preparations despite serving fewer voters. A key challenge is maintaining required political party balance among poll workers. With a limited number of available Republican poll workers, it can be difficult to meet statutory requirements, making staffing and scheduling more complex. Additionally, coordination with the City and Towns is necessary, as these municipalities are responsible for 100% of election costs, requiring clear communication and timely reimbursement.”
